Caroline Hoag is a former FBI Supervisory Special Agent. She has adapted her 22 years of investigative experience into a unique business. Rampart Group is pleased to offer this specialized in-depth investigative niche called Forensic Genealogy. Our clients have utilized Caroline's innovative research for Estate Settlement, location and identity of relatives, mapping family trees, and documenting historical timelines for clients and families.

During Caroline's FBI career, she specialized in the dogged pursuit of Money Laundering, Financial and Securities Fraud, and many other crimes. This sharp analytic ability taught her to discern and cull myriads of documents and records to successfully prosecute complex Federal cases. Now she uses similar techniques to analyze historical documents and sources to find breakthroughs where others hit roadblocks.

Caroline has a B.A. from Westmont College and M.A. from the University of Southern California. Additionally, she was an FBI Hostage Crisis Negotiator and FBI Special Operations Surveillance Supervisor. Her team received many accolades for outstanding work and innovative techniques. Caroline taught these best practices to other groups throughout the FBI.
